Nosetouch Press Goes Out of this World with Science Fiction Novel, *Farther

[Chicago] Nosetouch Press is releasing the debut science fiction/cosmic horror novel, Farther, by author Dean Vale. Set in a futuristic Earth where space explorers use wormhole technology to hop their way across the galaxy and beyond, and find themselves in way over their heads.

“Farther explores deep space from a very ruthless, mercantile perspective,” said Mr. Vale. “I see it as technology allowing people to expand beyond the Earth without really evolving their attitudes, with all the problems that result from that perspective.”

“Nosetouch Press is increasingly seeking out science fiction and fantasy titles,” said Dave Neal, editor-in-chief and co-publisher of Nosetouch Press. “Well-crafted stories that take new and exciting approaches to the genre. In this case, there’s a cosmic horror aspect to Farther that will be particularly memorable to fans of science fiction.”

“Dean Vale’s uncompromisingly cynical science fiction vision and tight literary style will make an impression on fans of social science fiction,” said Christine Scott, creative director and co-publisher.
