Nosetouch Press Announces Upon the Serpent's Tongue – the fifth novella in the Sagas of Irth fantasy series

[Chicago]Nosetouch Press announces the upcoming publication of a new Sagas of Irth fantasy novella, Upon the Serpent's Tongue, from author Dane Vale.

“Upon the Serpent's Tongue is the fifth of my Sagas of Irth novellas, featuring a return of Farys and Sibyl, the sword & sorcery duo who launched the series,” said Dane Vale. “Not strictly a sequel, but, rather, it’s the further adventures of Farys and Sibyl. I feel that it expands on a lot of the themes I’ve established with them in the earlier work and grows the world.”

“This latest novella from Vale puts the heroes on the island city-state of Nikos, ruled by the cruel sea witch, Ardiza. There, they work with the Dwarves of the Undercity to hatch a scheme to retake the fortress-city,” said David Neal, editor-in-chief and co-publisher of Nosetouch Press. “It’s a great adventure story that greatly expands the Sagas of Irth series.”

“While Nosetouch Press has primarily published horror titles, we are increasingly pursuing more fantasy and science fiction stories,” said Christine Scott, creative director and co-publisher of Nosetouch Press. “And more novellas, which are well-suited to readers who are pressed for time but who still want captivating stories.”

Nosetouch Press is an independent book publisher tandemly based in Chicago and Pittsburgh, with a commitment to bringing classical book design and excellent fiction to readers everywhere.

Upon the Serpent's Tongue will be released on February 1, 2022 in paperback and ebook formats.
