

THERE'S A LIGHT IN THE DARK AND IT SHOWS NO MERCY.

Something's rotten in the waters around Ludlow. It's turning townsfolk into the Brethren—pale and lifeless apparitions, monstrous reflections of themselves. The Brethren crave only the Light in the Dark, under the command of the Angel in the Depths. Guided by the shadowy cult leader, Mal Lazarus, who is intent on taking over the town, the Brethren stalk the streets of Ludlow, taking victims to the Mercy River, to a fate far worse than death.

Standing in the way of the Brethren are only a handful of people—a photographer, an art teacher, a student, a priest, and a federal agent—all trying to stop the Brethren from taking over Ludlow. But is it too late for the town, and, in the end, too late for the last Brethren of Ludlow to prevent Lazarus from realizing his dire dream in the service of the Light in the Dark?
