With the release of Norm, Nosetouch Press Serves up a Terrifying Finale to the Wolfshadow Trilogy

[Chicago] Nosetouch Press announces the third and final volume of the Wolfshadow Trilogy in the horror-thriller, Norm, including all-new cover designs.

“The Wolfshadow Trilogy follows several characters over the course of eight years since the start of the series with Saamaanthaa,” said D.T. Neal, author of the series. “The Happening ended on a cliffhanger and I felt an obligation to get to a satisfying conclusion for readers of the series.”

“We’re thrilled to be doing new cover designs for the books,” said Christine Scott, creative director and co-publisher of Nosetouch Press. “I’m confident that readers will understand and appreciate the werewolves in this trilogy. There are a lot of new characters, as well as ones from the first two books. And the new designs really bring out the werewolf aspect of the fiction.”

“While I think there are plenty of spinoff opportunities in this final book,” Neal said. “I’m also satisfied that Norm will bring a sense of closure to readers of the series. I’m not planning to do any spinoffs at this time, but I can’t rule that out, either.”

Nosetouch Press is an independent book publisher tandemly based in Chicago and Pittsburgh, with a commitment to bringing classical book design and excellent fiction to readers everywhere.

Norm will be released on October 31, 2021 in paperback and ebook formats.
