Nosetouch Press to Publish Grayson Daly's Paranormal Mystery Novel, The Untimely Undeath of Imogen Madrigal in May 2023

[Chicago] Nosetouch Press is further expanding its supernatural fiction offerings with the dazzling paranormal mystery novel from Grayson Daly, The Untimely Undeath of Imogen Madrigal, coming out in May 2023.

Set in the fictional island city of Lenorum, the novel focuses on Maeve, who is a member of the Sisterhood of Good Death—a religious order whose mission is to help the dead transition toward their next life. A random cemetery encounter with the mysteriously murdered poet, Imogen Madrigal, who has somehow returned from the dead, thrusts Maeve into solving Imogen's year-old murder, and, in the process, come to terms with what it means to live a good and fulfilling life.

"I've been writing fantasy and science fiction stories for six years," said Daly, who lives and works as an engineer in Boston. "This novel was inspired by a gorgeous old cemetery in a small New Hampshire town I'd lived in, as well as trips along the coasts of Maine and the experience of growing up both queer and Catholic."

"We're very excited to get this novel out there," said Dave Neal, editor-in-chief and co-publisher of Nosetouch Press. "Grayson writes with a power and precision that will draw in fans of dark fantasy, mysteries, and the gothic."

"This book creates an exceptionally evocative atmosphere," said Christine Scott, creative director and co-publisher of Nosetouch Press. "It conjures up both melancholy and poetic passion, and Daly has built a fascinating and unforgettable world in Lenorum."

Nosetouch Press is an independent book publisher tandemly based in Chicago and Pittsburgh, with a commitment to bringing classical book design and excellent fiction to readers everywhere.
