Nosetouch Press Publishing the Historical Occult Novel, The Promise of Plague Wolves, by Coy Hall

[Chicago] Nosetouch Press is proud to announce that it'll be publishing the occult historical horror novel, The Promise of Plague Wolves, by Coy Hall. Set in 17th century Austria and centering around the character of Dorin Toth, famed occultist and his greyhound companion, Vinegar Tom, as they deal with a supernatural epidemic of apocalyptic proportions.

"We're pleased to work with Coy on this novel," said Dave Neal, editor-in-chief and co-publisher of Nosetouch Press. "Hall's historically-detailed prose draws interest from readers looking for horrifying stories in exotic-feeling locales."

"Nosetouch Press continues to publish quality titles across genres, with an emphasis on classical design," said Christine Scott, creative director and co-publisher of Nosetouch Press. "Whether within horror, gothic and folk horror, as well as science fiction and fantasy, we offer books for readers who want captivating stories."

Nosetouch Press is an independent book publisher tandemly based in Chicago and Pittsburgh, with a commitment to bringing classical book design and excellent fiction to readers everywhere.

The Promise of Plague Wolves will release on September 12 in hardcover, paperback and ebook formats.
